

Public Printer Visits Southern Methodist University

The Public Printer of the United States Bob Tapella recently visited the Central University Libraries at Southern Methodist University (SMU) in Dallas, Texas. While in Dallas visiting the GPO Regional Office, he took advantage of the opportunity to see the Federal depository library collection and services at this active, large facility and to discuss the FDLP with the staff. The Government Information Department and the Libraries' Web pages outline the numerous services available to researchers. Notably, the library provides access to digitized "Historic Government Publications from World War II", publications in the FDLP from 1939-1945 that represent "all facets of the war effort, from military campaigns abroad to activities along the home front."

The tour at the university included a stop at the future site of the George W. Bush Presidential Center, which will be on the SMU campus.

{besps}tapella-smu{/besps} {besps_c}0|img1.png|Public Printer, Bob Tapella and Government Information Resources Librarian, Julia Stewart on the campus of Southern Methodist University (SMU).{|/besps_c} {besps_c}0|img2.png|Public Printer, Bob Tapella with Gillian McCombs, Dean and Director of the Central University Libraries.{|/besps_c} {besps_c}0|img3.png| (left to right) Cindy Boeke, Norwick Center for Digital Services; Bob Tapella, Public Printer; Rob Walker, Norwick Center for Digital Services; and Julia Stewart, Government Information Resources Librarian. {|/besps_c} {besps_c}0|img4.png| Julia Stewart, Government Information Resources Librarian, and Bob Tapella, Public Printer, standing in front of the Norwick Center for Digital Services.{|/besps_c}